An investigation of phase-dependent scattering in the spectral region 700-2500 nm. Wavelength-dependent light scattering in liquids is common in many biological and chemical applications, and can be used to study the structure of the sample. Of particular interest is the interaction of incident light with polymers, which is expected to be highly chromophore-dependent. In the present study, the interaction of polystyrene particles with water has been investigated, through measurements of the angular distribution of scattered light. Results are presented for the regions 700-2500 nm (532-1064 nm), and for wavelengths greater than 780 nm. The results are compared to the predictions of a dielectric model.

Want to Know More About Bird Rings? One of the most important things you can do as a bird enthusiast is to keep track of all the birds you see and for that you need a bird band, also known as a bird ring. When you start an interest in birding, birding birds make good companions. Birds are in constant motion so they need to know where the food is, where they want to nest, and where they want to spend their nights. It's for this reason that it's best to play a role in helping birds by giving them a bird ring. A bird ring can provide a lot of information about the birds that you see, such as their temperament, weight and diet, as well as their age. Birding bird rings are available in a number of different designs and colors, so you can be sure to find one that matches your style. In the wild, you'll often find birds banded. As a result, they are easy to spot, which makes birding bird rings even more special. When you decide to get a bird ring, you'll want to decide which
