Aqua beta screensaver 14 is a wonderful screensaver for windows, also for ubuntu. A personal video screen saver and a story. The screen saver shows a watery sky, with green plants growing. The background is slowly changing into a palette background, then into a sky-field, and then into a snowy landscape. Feb Feb Aqua beta screensaver 14 Welcome to the Aquatic World. This is a real and natural underwater world, with the water surface covered with a lively film of kelp.Q: Using the @ symbol as a part of a string in a SQL query I'm trying to create a SQL query but can't seem to find any examples that I can replicate. Here is what I'm trying to do: - I want to check if 2 values are not empty, the value of the 1st and the value of the 2nd. - These values are stored in 2 columns, named as ID and Name (both are of type long). I want to write a query to check if these 2 values are empty and if so don't return them. It should look something like this (but of course I want to check if not ID == 0 OR Name!= 0 SELECT * FROM [Table] WHERE Id = 0 OR Name = 0 Is this even possible? A: Try putting the condition inside brackets like SELECT * FROM [Table] WHERE (Id = 0 OR Name = 0) It'll work but to use the 'OR' condition you need to use brackets in this manner. By submitting this form, you are granting: The Arc of the United States, 1825 K Street NW, Washington, District of Columbia, 20006, United States, permission to email you.
