I was pretty anxious about trying it out, mostly worried that if I found out how hard it would be I would be disappointed and never want to do it again. However, as time went on and things were going well with the classes, I realised it wasn't as hard as I had feared and the benefit to doing it was huge. It felt good to push myself out of my comfort zone and mix up my practice, that's why I love it so much. This isn't to say that I never 'give up' or that I never lose motivation. I actually had a really hard time recently at my classes, I started off wanting to be able to maintain my fitness and did well, then a couple of months later I started to lose it and couldn't give up the jean shorts I had become so attached to. This was at the same time that a lot of life changes were happening for me and it felt like my priorities had changed. I became more concerned about looking a certain way, for other people instead of for myself and what was important to me. I just wasn't at the level of fitness I once was and I felt like I just didn't have time and energy to keep it up as I wanted to. What has helped me more recently, is when I have done my meditation and allowed myself to think about what is going on in my life and what I want, I have realised that I am happiest when I am the best and healthiest I can be. Yoga has helped me to become more flexible, stronger, have fun with different dance classes, cook and cook and cook and make memories with my best friends and family and practise being confident. My favourite way to class has been to have a try at doing asanas (asanas are yoga poses), I start by doing some sun salutations, then I do my chakras, a fusion of yoga and acro yoga that blends acrobatics, dance, gymnastics and yoga poses all together, it was pretty much the best way to start my class and see everyone really get warmed up. I get to do some breathing exercises too, this really gets my body moving, 570a42141b
