There has been a lot of progress and things are looking good. “I can remember my first game he played since his injury, he actually ran onto the pitch in a training session. There is a significant difference between now and then. “I’m very happy he’s doing so well, and for him to be able to play a bit of football. He’s a big part of the group and one of our main players. “He will be able to return to training with the group on Saturday.”Sandground Sandground is an American manufacturer of outdoor clothing. History 1956-1969 Sandground was founded as an outdoor activity company in 1956. Sandground founder Jerome Marsack started his company as just a small business, with one salesperson and five samples. He opened his first retail store the following year. 1970-1999 Sandground started acquiring large outdoor ski and snow apparel companies during the 1970s. The company was named by Jerome Marsack, as a tribute to his moto-cross race team. By the 1980s, Sandground had become one of the largest outdoor brands in the world. In the 1990s, Sandground entered a variety of markets, including watches, e-mail systems, equestrian wear and baseball wear. They began manufacturing most of their products in-house, including helmets, watches, snowboards, and gloves. 2000-present In 2000, Sandground was acquired by the Steltek Corporation for $281 million. The acquisition represented Sandground's highest point in its history. In 2004, Sandground found itself in the midst of a national recall of numerous ski wear lines. The recall covered over 800,000 pairs of footwear that were believed to contain a high-density foam that had been glued to the bottom of the shoe. Sandground voluntarily recalled the shoe. In the United States, over 1 million pairs of sand boots were donated to charity, while the other shoes were resold. Sandground's executive vice president said the company's goals in the wake of the recall were to take 570a42141b
