A: Even though I am a developer I am no expert. But the quickest way I can think to do this is to create the installer yourself. Follow the instructions below. Note that the instructions below are based on the below link. It will provide the script to convert the zip to an MSI. Compiling the link provided should require you to run a couple of commands. run the following commands. `choco install winbuild nuget c:\luciddownloader\bundlecompiler\bin\bundlecompiler.exe.\winbuild -b- "C:\\" -r "C:\luciddownloader\bundlecompiler\wininstaller\manifest.wxi.bin" -t "C:\luciddownloader\bundlecompiler\wininstaller\manifest.wxi.def"` Authors: Nick Talbot and Rosa Messina, iMAGINE Project Abstract: Technology is a key part of today's society. It impacts everything that we do and how we do it. Whilst most of this impact is positive, there is a need to be aware of how technology can be used in a negative way. Whilst technology is a relatively constant part of our world, the rate at which it evolves means that many new "bad" technologies are being created on an almost daily basis. In this session, we look at a specific case study that explores the potential negative impacts of new technology. We focus on the use of technology as part of a training programme for undergraduate students. The "always on" internet and ever-increasing use of smartphones and social media are a common feature in the lives of today's students. As training programmes are typically delivered in a face-to-face format these environments are not conducive to training delivery. In response to this and in response to new learning demands, an online training programme was developed. The internet is a major driving force for many changes, including advancements in education. The research explores whether using an online training programme for newly-graduated students leads to positive or negative long-term impacts on student skills, strategies and social practices.
