Registry Corrector is a small utility tool that can analyze your Windows registry and fix any invalid items. Since installation is not necessary, Registry Corrector is portable. You can place it on a removable drive and directly run its executable file on any computer. Also, it will not place its own keys in the registry. The interface of the application is based on a standard window in which you have limited options. In "Settings" you can set Registry Corrector to look for problems regarding the registry integrity, software locations, shared programs, help and resources, fonts, sounds, ActiveX and COM entries, the startup programs list, and others. But you can also enable the tool to add the found help and font files to the registry, specify the location for backups (it automatically does this before scanning the registry), as well as the directory for a log file. The program requires a low amount of system resources and quickly finishes a scan and clean task. It doesn't include a help file. Unfortunately, Registry Corrector popped up several errors during our tests, when attempting to scan sound and COM items (we were forced to restart the application). But the biggest problem of the tool is that it doesn't allow you to select individual items to clean - it simply does this automatically. All in all, Registry Corrector is a pretty unstable software when it comes to such a sensitive issue as the registry. Plus, it lacks some very important functions. We recommend you look for something more advanced. * Take advantage of Registry Corrector's built-in backup capability and create several backups of your registry. * Fix invalid programs by clicking the Launch button and run the correct program on every invalid item. * Clean and repair invalid registry keys by clicking the Fix button and scanning the entries you need. * Undo changes by clicking the Undo button. * View log file for further information on scan results. * Take advantage of Registry Corrector's built-in backup capability and create several backups of your registry. * Fix invalid programs by clicking the Launch button and run the correct program on every invalid item. * Clean and repair invalid registry keys by clicking the Fix button and scanning the entries you need. * Undo changes by clicking the Undo button. * View log file for further information on scan results. * Set Registry Corrector to automatically scan the registry, or schedule scan on certain days. * Fix invalid programs by clicking the Launch button and run the correct program on every invalid item. * Clean and repair invalid registry keys by clicking the Fix button and scanning the entries you need. * Undo changes by clicking the Undo button. * View log file for further information on scan results.
