The 40-year-old woman told investigators that she does not know who purchased the fireworks, A.J. Vanderlinden, spokesman for the Seattle Police Department, said. Vanderlinden said the woman told officers she thought it was OK to light fireworks in the church parking lot. In an interview with The Associated Press, Vanderlinden said the woman set off the fireworks on Tuesday afternoon in the back parking lot of the Mount Vernon Full Gospel Baptist Church in Los Angeles' Highland Park section. A church employee discovered the woman after hearing a loud noise and saw that someone had lit the fireworks in a remote area of the church's parking lot, Vanderlinden said. The employee contacted police, who arrested the woman. Vanderlinden said investigators believe the woman was not drunk or high. He said police tried to contact the person who purchased the fireworks but had been unsuccessful.Description The latest content updates to ride builder PC version (yes, the Android version has a later update, stay tuned) are now available!
