Vim is a text editor, more precisely, a programmer's text editor. It's text editor which features a lot of functionality and a very small footprint. Here are the five key features that vim offers:

- Plugin Support Vim has a large library of plugins, which add even more functionality and even more features to vim. There are plugins which offer syntax coloring, file management, spell checking and much more. If you ever use other applications which have plugins, you can import them directly into vim and use them.
- Documentation Vim has an extremely extensive and comprehensive user's guide that you can consult whenever you need help. It's totally free to consult and it's always there for you to browse through. You can use vim's built in search functionality or vim's built in tag search.
- Syntax Highlighting Vim has a large number of syntax highlighters. You can configure them individually and enable them for just about any programming language, file type and file extension.
- Folding If you need a function to fold a code block, for instance, you can use the folding command. You can configure folding so that only certain blocks and certain code elements are folded and the rest is left unchanged.
- AutoIndent

The Lost City of Z is a $70 million project to bring to the big screen. The movie adaptation of David Grann's New York Magazine article is based on four "lost" expeditions into Amazonia by British explorer Percy Fawcett. The three expeditions in question occurred during the 1920s and 30s. The fourth expedition, in 1925, was the last and only one of which any remains have been discovered. Antonia Fraser, the author of the short-story, "The Wild Girl", is producing The Lost City of Z, which will be based on the fourth expedition, led by Fawcett and a captain, Jack Man. The project went to a scriptwriter and when I say scriptwriter, I mean an experienced documentary producer, Alice Rawsthorn. According to The Hollywood Reporter: Rawsthorn is a veteran of dramatic programming who has executive produced documentaries for HBO and ESPN. In this case, Rawsthorn will co-produce with documentary filmmaker Alex Gibney, who won an Oscar for his Palme d'Or winner, The Act of Killing. Rawsthorn and Gibney are currently in postproduction on the Oscar nominated documentary, Scientology: The Now Religion, which explores the history and present-day operations of the controversial religion. An interview with Rawsthorn: The director David Grievess told IndieWire last year about the casting process: "Finding the right actors for the roles is something we've been talking about for about a year and a half now. It's very important because we're dealing with extremely fascinating material and we need people who can tell the story, and who are interested in the story and committed to our story. And once those two elements are there and we bring them together on set it becomes the most compelling, engaging adventure story ever told." "The thing I love most about [Z], and it's really impossible to articulate without KickMyGraphics! allows you to create a series of frames in an animated GIF from a variety of available source files. In addition, it supports image and video files in both jpg and png format as well as general frames from WMV, MOV, and MP4 format. Darkshot is a cross-platform freeware Photoshop-like application for the iPad developed by Atomicomist. It features several drawing, editing and scripting tools and a simple point-and-click interface. InAppCleanupScript was a simple In-App Configuration Script developed by our friend Bill Evans, and it can help you make your applications even more convenient. For example, if your application uses the manual way of cleaning the app cache and the temporary folders, this script can help you to make it automatic. The function will first check for a folder named InAppCleanupScript and if it doesn't exist, the script will create it. After that, it will prompt your app to clean the caches and temporary files. To do so, the script will check for a folder named "Preferences" in both the "Library" and the "Documents" folders, as well as for the "document_tmp" folder in the "Safari" folder. The script will also check for a folder named "iAppCache" in the "Documents" folder if an iPad is in Airplane Mode to avoid deleting the app caches. The script will also check for the existence of "Info.plist" in the application bundle, if your application uses "Info.plist". Then, it will write a backup file of the app's Preferences folder. After that, it will remove all the files, caches, preferences, temporary files and the backup file, if the script finds it. The folder structure used by the script will be similar to the default one, so you can easily adjust it to your system. If you want to learn more about the script, you can visit the project's page. The script works on iDevices that are running iOS 5.0 or later. Also, you can get this script for free. For more information about this script, you can visit the project's page.
