One of the most well-known features of the editor is the Content Aware fill. It automatically fills the selection with an object or content from the image. This could be used to fill a hole, duplicate an object, or apply a watermark, all of which I've used in the past. Although the editor ships with a selection tool (CMD + LMB), the selection tool isn't able to easily select a specific feature in the image. Rather, you have to zoom in or out to find it, like this: Fortunately, the selection tool is able to select individual objects in the image. To make this selection even easier, you can assign a shortcut key for each object in the image. Here's how to do that. 1. Select an object in the image you want to select 2. Press the shortcut key for the object you want to select. For example, pressing I on the keyboard will select the eye in the image above.

3. Left-click on the object that was selected when you pressed the shortcut key. 4. Right-click on the object to select and place it in the clipping mask. If you're looking for more control over the clipping mask, you're in luck. With the Command + Alt + Shift + MMB shortcut, you can move the selection and change the options of the Clipping Mask. You can copy items from one layer to another in the same way that Photoshop will copy the selected item to a new layer. Simply press CMD + J. To add a new layer, you can select an area of the image, then press the layer icon in the layers panel: Or you can select the Layer icon in the layers panel directly and click on the Add Layer icon to add a new layer. Click + in the layers panel to add a new layer over the selected layer. If you want to edit a layer that is already open, highlight the layer in the layers panel and use the layer tools (Layer>Lock Selection) or layer tools (Layers > Layer Tools > Lock). Use CMD + C to Copy, CMD + F to Paste and CMD + Y to Merge layers. To create a new layer over the selected layer, use the layer icon in the layers panel and click on the layer icon

S-1 monotherapy or a combination therapy, the use of radiation alone is usually not considered a good treatment option. Many clinical trials have evaluated the efficacy of S-1 monotherapy or S-1 plus radiation (standard concurrent chemoradiotherapy) in early-stage gastric cancer. However, the evidence is conflicting. (1) A clinical trial, JGCA 0303, conducted by the Japan Clinical Oncology Group compared S-1 monotherapy to S-1 plus radiation in postoperative stomach cancer. Although the S-1 plus radiation combination was superior with respect to overall survival, there was no significant difference between the two groups for recurrence-free survival. (2) Concurrent chemoradiotherapy has also been evaluated in postoperative stomach cancer. In the GASTRIC trial, a Japanese study involving 554 patients, the overall survival rate was significantly higher in the chemoradiotherapy group than in the radiation monotherapy group (P
