2013 Boys basketball season The 2013 Boys basketball season will be the 135th season of basketball for Brigham Young University (BYU) and the 31st season in the West Coast Conference. The Cougars were led by sixth-year head coach Mark Pope. In the 2013 season, the Cougars were one of the four Division I schools in the nation to be unranked in the AP Poll at the start of the season (along with Kansas, Purdue and New Mexico), but were ranked for five weeks after the opening week of the season and won their 24th West Coast Conference regular season title. The Cougars advanced to the final of the 2013 West Coast Conference Men's Basketball Tournament and earned their ninth appearance in the National Invitation Tournament. Season recap December On December 2, it was announced that freshman guard Brett Borchers had been named the West Coast Conference Rookie of the Year. Borchers led the Cougars in scoring and rebounding in his first season as a Cougar.
