Tag: Surf info Happy new year to all readers of our blog, whether you subscribe and read regularly or that you've stumbled across a post or two here and there. We at Surfing Alaska love to share information about the Alaska sports and activities we cover on the blog, but as we've started to talk about the bigger picture of the state, we've noticed that with all the sports and information we cover, there's a whole lot of surfing out there in Alaska

as well. So here is a list of resources, events, organizations and how you can be a part of the surfing community in Alaska! Got questions about surfing in Alaska? Join the Alaska Surfing Association Facebook Group! Surfing out there in Alaska While a majority of the state is open ocean, there are actually a few good coastal surf spots where you can enjoy wave riding! Nearest big towns to surf spots: Anchorage, AK in unorganized areas: Next to Nearest Big Towns to surf spots Anchorage: Fairbanks: Nearest Big Towns to surfing spots: Let's not forget the awesome waves Alaska has to offer. Most likely you've heard about the Alaska Seward Peninsula but not many people know about the Seward Peninsula. There's also the Prudhoe Bay which has lots of those goliaths giants that you see off shore in the movies. We've also got the Kenai Peninsula which covers a lot of land, we'll get into that in a bit. Also don't forget about Alaska's Southcentral region which encompasses all the islands and peninsulas south of the Seward Peninsula and Kenai Peninsula in the Gulf of Alaska that includes the Aleutians, which is where we get the full name of the island nation "Alaska". If you're interested in a big snowboarder's paradise, think of the Kenai Mountains, Talkeetna Mountains, Chugach Mountains,
