"We saw a real opportunity to elevate the game with new technology that adds new dimensions of play," said Jake Ansell, Managing Director of EA SPORTS FIFA. "It's a technological leap over the systems available in FIFA 20." First, to bring the game to life, the player data is used to create over 1,000 in-game animations. It also provides the unique ability to add a real-life player's personality and style to the game. Players can record their own routines, work with the Soccer AI to create unique behaviors, and design their own Goalkeepers using new technology called Goalkeeper Crouch. EA SPORTS has built a new, four-pronged strategy around the collection, use and manipulation of player data that is unique to FIFA 22. Improvements to the Player Transfer System, an integration of the FIFA App, an upgrade of the FIFA Ultimate Team and a new Club Communication System are all part of FIFA 22's "Ready for the Show" roadmap, which spans the entire life of the game. EA SPORTS selected the top 22 players at each level of the game world, from youth to professional. Players are ranked on their combined attributes from FUT 19, the FUT points bonus from FUT 20 and the core FIFA attributes. The 22-player sample player rankings are sent directly to FIFA 22 and are used to rank players for Ultimate Team, and to determine whether a player will show up in a FUT Draft. A draft consists of two phases — ranking and then bid-bidding. The closer a player ranks, the more likely he or she is to play in the draft. Players are not required to make any trades to become eligible for the draft, but anything beyond what they already have is up for grabs. Player data is also used to create several new modes for FIFA Ultimate Team. Players will be able to edit and improve their custom jerseys and add new player items. Player Crouch, a new tool that enables players to create custom Goalkeepers. Goalkeepers can crouch — a new advanced technique that provides a unique look and control in the air. When a player crouches, his or her stance will change. Players will be able to find and add pre-designed crouch animations to specific positions. FUT Drafts will see a new rating system created using player data. Instead of
