This campaign requires you to fly 12 unique Sabre missions, each with its own briefing, missions set-ups, detailed mission descriptions, and additional mission specific information. All missions take place in the lead up to the Korean War. Various missions require different tactics and are flown in different environments, from Pyongyang to the "land of the thousand liangs". Your ability to complete missions will be negatively affected by the following factors: your health status, your aircraft state, weather conditions and the number of enemy fighters in the area. There are also multiple interruptions. For instance, you may get sidetracked by fighter attacks, be called into a formation to escort bombers, or be asked to standby to escort a friendly flight to a different location. This is a single player campaign and will be completed within one playthrough. The campaign is divided into 3 parts, each consisting of 4 missions. These missions are not interlinked in any way and can be flown one after the other without needing to complete any missions before the next one. Missions are well marked in the mission list and you are able to go directly to them, skip sections or replay sections.

Different missions will take you from the Korean Peninsula, to the Lend Lease base in Wonsan, or deep into MIG Alley. Special thanks to Christof Busse for helping me to flesh out this campaign. In this campaign you will have to fly a number of missions against a variety of air units. Enemy mission targets will include tanks, ground units, airdromes, supply columns, bridges, airfields, harbor facilities and coastal targets. At the end of each mission you will be rewarded with points for destroying specific targets and for reaching the objectives set for you. You can use the points you gain to purchase upgrades for your weapons, armor, engines, ECM, radar, radio and other systems of your aircraft. Each mission has a specific set of objectives, some of them are hard to reach and could give your enemy a chance of reaching the end of the mission first. What's new:

Origin of blood (Lunar Stone) Water is essential to life in every form: a cell, a plant, an animal, or the atmosphere we live in. It is also essential to obtaining the needed energy for any one of these four elements. Without the four elements, a change in any one element would result in a change in the state of the entire. In order to obtain sufficient water, always, each element in the cycle must also receive its necessary amount. Each element requires certain components to be fulfilled in order to be acted upon and then return as the element's best constituent, such as the originating body releasing water as its most elementary point of return, or the surrounding body absorbing water into its cells. Water is very essential to life because it stands at the origin for the movement of all materials. Water is the medium in which everything - from ice to the elements - exists. Water can hold on to, or reject water; penetrate or exclude water; make up a liquid, a gas, or a solid depending on the temperature and pressure. Liquid water is invisible, odorless, tasteless, and nearly weightless; solid ice is colorless, tasteless, and odorless; and steam is white, heavy, and odorous. All the water around us is constantly in motion, constantly changing from liquid to gas, or from gas to a solid. As material is absorbed or transferred and evaporates at various temperatures and pressures within our living bodies, this becomes a process of capturing the positive electric current or the positive entropy. While we must constantly have enough liquid to hold the body together, if the liquid contains the negative or decaying current, it will change into gas and then the decaying matter is visible in the form of odor, color, temperature, and other visible signs. When a body becomes dehydrated it starts to get a musty, earthy odor. Blood that is not transformed is earth-like, foul smelling, and may appear to have a sickly, decaying odor. When the body is in its normal state, it's blood is bright and white. The blood has barely any foul odor. When a body dies, the blood begins to have a deep, dark purple color. The body starts to smell like rotting meat. Thus, it is clear that the color of the blood has to be changed to the color of the life force or anima. This is where the lunar stone comes into play. Signifying the change that occurs in two moons,
