Edit: 3/12/16: I changed my email to Gmail at the suggestion of some commenters. I switched back to AOL, but unfortunately GMail has a black bar on the right side that I can't get rid of. I had to re-add the Hexed email. The only other way I can get a black bar there is to add it to my Tumblr theme, but that makes the RSS feed weird, and I can't make the normal buttons available. If anyone has any ideas, please let me know. :) I updated the code to remove email address URLs like these. Sorry, but I get SO many spam comments that this won't take much time at all. I might convert this to a Tumblr or even Instagram. It might be a fun little experiment. -JPI

In association with increasing amounts of data to be processed, semiconductor devices such as central processing units (CPUs) have been progressively made in higher integration, higher speeds, and lower power consumption. For example, CPUs are increasingly miniaturized, and it is demanded that a power-saving operation be effected by reducing the operating voltage of the CPUs. On the other hand, a power supply voltage lower than that in a normal operation is required for an operation of a memory or a peripheral circuit forming a part of a CPU, and accordingly, peripheral circuits are driven using a still lower voltage. On the other hand, the CPUs of recent years have risen in processing speed, and have been expected to continue the same speed in the future. Therefore, reducing the power consumption of the CPUs is now demanded. For achieving the same power consumption, a characteristic is demanded for a transistor forming a part of a CPU. For example, it is considered to make a threshold voltage of the transistor lower to the limit of a breakdown voltage (e.g., to the limit of about 1.2 V) to reduce the gate-source voltage of the transistor in a standby state, thereby reducing the power consumption. In addition, as a result of the downsizing of a device, there has been a problem that a transistor becomes large in gate-drain capacitance C_{gd} , so
