Unfortunately, there is no quick and easy way to get a good address and phone number for an organization by phone. You can usually get the information by phone from the secretary, or if there is one, the executive director. The phone number is usually listed. Once you have the number, be sure to double check it as many organizations will have transferred or misplaced the number, especially after moving buildings or staff. If the number is no longer in use simply ask to be placed on the new number. However, even after a good call, you may be asked for

The reason this happens is that you can avoid making the extra phone call, and you can print the address, phone and e-mail addresses when you save them. If you are having problems locating the phone number, try looking online. Some phone companies list their phone number on their website, allowing you to find the number online. d. If you get a list of the addresses of the organizations, in a list, it will make it easy to find everything later. However, with the e-mail address, you can save a lot of time by calling. Remember to save the information after calling. Even if the e-mail address does not work, you can just save it as website. e. Using Word: Once you have the list of organizations in their proper order, you can save them in word format, which can be very handy if you decide to have your library put together in a word document. Using the list and a printer, you can print a sample copy of the letter. At this time, make sure you include a standard letter of introduction. If the organization allows d41b202975
