history of a line (the up-down method used by @Kroon2018) starts with a line at the initial epoch, and calculates the time when a line reaches the minimum or maximum height above the primary-beam correction region after the entire line is observed. For each point in the time-dependent apparent position/size map, the line width at that point is extracted and corrected by a factor $\frac{\text{fwhm}}{\sin\delta}$, where δ is the angle between the line and the direction to the point on the sky. These corrected widths are used as the line width at every point in the time-dependent apparent position/size map. [^1]: {4FC737F1-C7A5-4376-A066-2A32D752A2FF}
