We've recently made a couple of small improvements for the game, most notably playing animations when you successfully type. These take up the time with a cool jingle! Unity Publishing: Unity game kits are also supported. A tutorial on how to do this is available on the linked youtube channel. This allows you to create and publish your own characters. Please note that since unity is free and you can license your own characters, it doesn't cost you to license a character, but if you want to be able to set the price for your characters, you need to pay unity. This is because the game service don't have the permissions to set the price for you. Keflezighi will stay in the race at the Boston Marathon. In order to qualify, runners had to break the 20-year-old record. Fifty-eight-year-old Meb held on to that record for 2:49.49. Meb broke it at the Los Angeles Marathon last week. His teammate Shalane Flanagan finished second. "We definitely made history today in Boston," said Keflezighi. "We made history in the marathon world. We're very happy. We look forward to a very warm welcome. We're super-proud to be American." The silver lining? Keflezighi left the race in the 5th with an 8:28 PR. Next year he'll have plenty of time to prepare for the London Olympics.

Dozen YOU DA BEAWARE OF THIS DOG. HE EATS CHEAPLY WEARING THE SUNGLASSES....DON'T FORGET TO CRY AT THE END. I am writing to beg a favour of you. Please, if you happen to be one of the few humans who still feeds stray dogs, I need some rum. As a lifelong boy from the island of my birth, I have always loved animals and pets and, in fact, I had a pet fishing cat called Namba from the age of four. I won't say much about him because I think I rather like Uncle Warren on the Amazing Johnathan, but my understanding of fish is minimal. He was, by all accounts, a large as a gigantic walrus and he spent all his time frolicking in water. His head was so big it came up right over his chest and he would devour all the food I threw into his water and only lost half his weight during food. He was a real terror. Anyway, I am sure by now you have all heard about the PETA maddogs trying to turn public opinion against the pet industry by scandalising dogs at restaurants, trying to make restaurants charge pet owners more than they charge customers who do not have pets and otherwise behaving with the utter and complete inconsideration towards the welfare of dogs you would expect from a human. So, I just thought I would write you a letter and tell you that, whilst you are not an ocean away in Asia, and whilst I know that you may have found yourself being bombarded with complaints this past week from dog-owning tourists hooning around Thailand, you are a man of large heart and also of vast experience and understanding of humans, and, well, anyway, I could borrow a dog from you for my own personal use. There is this dog in residence in Bangkok now, living in a huge caravan park and travelling around the city. Only mildly interested in humans, he does not like to be hit, constantly defecates and piddles over the property and has stolen a lot of food. In short, he does not have a good ring to him. I am asking, as an old friend of yours and a grateful pupil, if you would be so kind as to allow him to stay in your spare room. I will supply him with all that he needs, I will put the
