1280x720 is the size of your screen. It always shows the game in this resolution. 1280x720 is roughly the size of a 24 inch monitor. If you have such a monitor you will see that the game has higher resolution. Most people have monitors that are around 22-23 inch. They will see that the game looks better at this resolution. For those with 24 inch monitors they will see that the game can't be played at 1280x720 resolution due to low graphic settings. The game needs 800x600 resolution. This is the standard resolution for LCD televisions. If your television supports 800x600 you can adjust the settings in your TV to 1080p or 720p. If it doesn't support 800x600 the game should either run in window mode or run at a higher resolution. 1366x768 is the most common resolution for 25 inch screens. It is basically the same as 1366x768 with the only difference being the fact that it is up-scaled for the larger screen size. Most people have monitors that are around 22-23 inch. They will see that the game has higher resolution. Most people with 25 inch monitors will have the game running at 1366x768 or 720p because it will look the same as 1280x720. For those with 24 inch screens you will see that the game can't be played at 1366x768 resolution because it will look too low. Streamlining quality settings is a major way that you can reduce loading time for games running on a SSD, especially if you want to keep your images full-screen. That means you will need to look up a guide to make sure you have the correct settings in Steam before you begin playing. need for a mental health tribunal A man will be able to challenge an NHS psychiatric decision to discharge him under a law passed by the general election. Campaigner Lord Caudwell won a battle with Lambeth Council over his admission to the hospital. But the government had limited his right to a judicial review - which he said amounted to an "injustice". Under the Mental Capacity Act, no right of appeal will be recognised to high court rulings made under the act on mental health issues. Lord Caudwell's legal challenge, in the Court of Appeal, was over the extent to which he had a right to a judicial review of the decision to discharge him. His family had pushed for the review after he was sent to Broadmoor Hospital in Berkshire for a psychiatric assessment because of suicidal thoughts, to allow him to go home. 'Justified fears' The Court of Appeal ruled last August that Lambeth Council was wrong to bar Lord Caudwell from pursuing a judicial review of the decision not to admit him to a mental health hospital. A judicial review, the court ruled, "will afford a forum in which to challenge a decision taken under the Mental Capacity Act 2005 and to seek relief where the applicant's entitlement to a full hearing and appeal is limited". But the government in London had limited the right to a judicial
