The accuracy of dual photon absorptiometry in measuring diaphyseal bone mineral density in patients with rheumatoid arthritis has been questioned. This study re-evaluates the dual energy X-ray absorptiometry (DXA) precision of dual photon absorptiometry for measuring bone mineral density in patients with osteopenia and rheumatoid arthritis and in osteoporotic post-menopausal women. The lateral hand and foot bone mineral density measurements were determined with a DXA system (Lunar Prodigy) in 29 patients with rheumatoid arthritis, 19 women with osteoporosis, and 31 women after estrogen therapy. The coefficient of variation for the inter-observer precision was 2.2% for the second lumbar vertebrae (L2) and 1.9% for the distal one third of the radius. The correlation coefficient with bone mineral density by dual photon absorptiometry of the second lumbar vertebrae and of the distal one third radius was 0.97 (P 10 Things I Wish I Could Have Done Differently with Reverie Mobile 10 Things I Wish I Could Have Done Differently with Reverie Mobile Remember those days where, upon your back pocket, you always carried a little piece of paper with you that you could cross off as you attained your goals?
