Compatible with both Windows and Mac operating systems, Photoshop Elements can be used to manipulate images. Adobe Photoshop has long been the industry standard. However, in recent years, software that fills the gap between traditional Photoshop and the simpler offerings from Adobe has emerged. ImageMagick ImageMagick is another software that is used to manipulate images on computers. ImageMagick is a tool that can convert images, resize images, delete unwanted elements, repair defects, and compress images. Using ImageMagick, a website can optimize images to save bandwidth and reduce data storage. You can use ImageMagick to resize images, crop images, alter transparency, create art from scratch, create vector logos, create GIFs, apply effects to images, and remove background images. Pixlr Pixlr is a free photo editing software, so there are no credit card required for using the software. PixelDraw is a similar software that also has a simple interface and many functions, but at present, Pixlr is more common among most users. Pixlr can be used to edit RAW and JPEG files. It can also be used to create GIFs, filters, and frames. Pixlr offers functions that are similar to those of Adobe Photoshop. SketchUp SketchUp is a cross-platform 3D software that can be used to edit both 2D and 3D images. SketchUp can add effects to images, create new objects, convert models into images, and create 3D models from an image. SketchUp is free for both personal and commercial use. SketchUp is a leading 3D design application in the field of 3D modeling and web design. It is designed to create geometries, applying texture, lighting and shading options to models. Therefore, SketchUp is a good alternative to 3D modeling software like Autodesk or Maya. Illustrator Illustrator is one of the most powerful Adobe design applications. It can be used to edit both photographs and vector images. For example, you can use Illustrator to create beautiful fonts, logos, and images. You can create and edit vector graphics with Illustrator. Photoshop Photoshop is a powerful photo-editing software application. It can be used to work with RAW or JPEG files and other formats. ok so seriously does anyone know the difference between a 17 and a 18 I really want the 18 but its REALLY CHEAP so I get it for $99. And I got a good deal on the krells aunty filters for around $120 is it a great deal or should I keep it? I really would rather get the 17 because I get the aunty filters for only $185. is that worth it? I'm not picky to much, I just dont want to get a bag that is going to die Ok, so I got both a 17 and a 18 and I'm so confused. What's the difference? I'm looking for a bag with like, two or three handles, multiple compartments, like a block that fits in the back pouch and a slot to put my ipod. Like all the standard bags but more durable. Basically, I want a normal bag but I don't want to get ripped off because the 18 is so cheap. Ok, so I got both a 17 and a 18 and I'm so confused. What's the difference? Basically, I want a normal bag but I don't want to get ripped off because the 18 is so cheap. Click to expand... i'm definitely confused. the difference is the size, the 18 is bigger. the 18 has more compartments, the 17 doesn't. the 18 is also more durable, although really the first thing you'll notice about the 17 is that it is a half-size smaller than an 18. your best bet is to go to a place that sells backpacks and just try them on. the 17 is a smaller bag. so you can get a kid's 17 and get a larger backpack. I have an 18 and an 18 II. I carry it in my backpack, I love them both equally. It's a matter of personal taste. Click to expand... I too have an 18 and a 18 II. I also have a kwack; and it's the exact same. It's got the same weight, size and everything. The only difference is the bag it

Now she's suing her former bosses. An off-duty cop accused of repeatedly punching a teenage girl in the face during a nasty sidewalk dispute is set to go to trial next month on assault charges. Alexandria Nieves Hernandez filed the lawsuit in Queens Supreme Court on Tuesday against Benjamin Turner — the top cop at the 120th precinct in Elmhurst, just north of Jackson Heights — and the city's Department of Correction. She's claiming Turner — who was off-duty and not in uniform at the time — threw her to the ground and punched her three times in the face and body when she confronted him last year outside a relatives-only social club she was frequenting on the corner of 103rd Street and 76th Avenue. A video shot by Hernandez's husband and posted on YouTube showed the young girl — who was just a few inches taller than the NYPD officer's 6-foot-3 frame — lunging at him. But the lawsuit argues Turner, a source of public humiliation for his department, made the situation worse by publicly accusing Hernandez of violating a "no touch" rule which banned him from having contact with members of the public. "The only contact that defendant Turner had with the plaintiff ... was at the time that he punched her in the face and body and threw her to the ground in the middle of the intersection," the suit says. Hernandez, who was 17 at the time, suffered a fractured nose, a fractured cheekbone, a closed-head injury and a concussion, according to the complaint. The teen's mom, Ilona Colmenares, is suing the city and NYPD for failing to protect her daughter. As Hernandez tried to walk home after the clash, Turner allegedly "nudged" her backside and made her turn around to face him before slamming her to the ground. Turner had been issuing Hernandez a summons for not providing proof of ID when she was asked to produce a badge at the social club, the complaint says. Hernandez had no record of past arrests, but her mother said last month that she was known to "cuss at people and act rowdy." A spokeswoman for the mayor's office said Thursday the city couldn't comment. A source close to the NYPD said the department "is aware of the complaint and we are looking
