I have a simple product attribute called shipping method and it can have multiple values. I want to have a grand total of how many orders have a specific shipping method. I have a helper file that will get all the values for the attribute. _eventManager->dispatch('checkout_update_shipping_method', ['method' => $value]); } $attribute = $this->getAttribute('shipping_method'); foreach($attribute->getSource()->getAllOptions() as $option) { $method = $option['value']; $method = (string) $method; $this->setShippingMethod($method); } Is there a way I can get the grand total of orders that have a shipping method of "VAT"? A: So far I can think of two solutions. Both of them involve saving the data you are collecting and then querying for it later. Here are the specifics: Option one: You can add the shipping method to a custom attribute and then use a simple quote observer to pull out the data for you. This piece was originally published in MERKEL THE MAGAZINE #140, October 1999. The publication was closed abruptly in 2000, without publishing the final issue, except for these notes. While searching for a copy to re-publish this piece, the name "Daniel Merkle" appeared several times in the articles pertaining to the magazine. However, I am about as sure as I can be that the author is the same man as I believe that Dan De Nardan, the "son of a prostitute" was the name of the late brother of Agostino Piavolo. In 1845 the city of Napoli, Italy, became the headquarters of "the Holy See of the Sacred Congregation of Propaganda", the new Vicariate Apostolic of the Roman "Holy See of Rome and Vassal of the Sovereign Pontiff". Many of the priests at the time were from the Northern Italy area, including the Diocese of Bolzano (as we call it now, but not then), and the Diocese of Trento. As all his life Agostino Piavolo had few friendships and few numbers of acquaintances. In fact he was born into an environment that he did not know; a world he found strange. "Sefirot Shards" is a project by Team Game - an independent game studio created by people who have already received their portfolio of indie games (Full: SmallTownPuzzler, HouseAway, TypoMonsta, Vodnik, CityElf). All artwork and music, supplied by the two guys involved. The team is already working on two other projects: 'We Can Tell a Story' and 'Kaalpurush', which will help you to get to know the creators even better. In the not too distant future, Team Game hopes to present the most prominent indie projects not only in the world of games, but in the whole gaming industry. "Sefirot Shards" is the first title of our ambitious initiative. _____ "Sefirot Shards" is a project of Team Game, a group of two guys. I'm Vilen, and he's Konstantin. We're two young guys who've started making games since we were about 13. Our first indie title was in 2011 and it was a computer game called "SmallTownPuzzler". It's a two-dimensional puzzle platformer where you get to meet a cute little girl who slowly loses her memory as a result of the many questions you ask her. The point of "SmallTownPuzzler" was to make a dark, yet comical story, and to establish a comfortable game playing interface. In the years that followed, we've made quite a few small, fun games, like "TyposMonsta" (2011), "Vodnik" (2014) and "CityElf" (2015). We consider ourselves as developers and not as a team. We work on every project separately and both of us independently create the graphics, the music, the concept and the gameplay. We're more serious about gaming than about filmmaking, and we love all things creative. So when we made our first video-game, we wanted to stay that way forever. We wanted to make a real game. But we also made a mistake. It's so hard to separate the "art�
