Free. .The present invention is directed to a gravity feed storage tank and, in particular, to a gravity feed storage tank for use as a fuel storage tank on a vehicle. It is well known in the prior art to use vehicles as a means of transportation of material such as gasoline and other fuels from a source to a receiving point. In most situations, it is desirable to be able to transport the vehicle to the receiving point without having to stop and collect the fuel. For example, in situations where the distance to the receiving point is great and/or it is not possible to perform a refuelling operation at a convenient place, it is desirable to be able to transport the vehicle over the great distance with the fuel remaining in the vehicle still providing the vehicle with sufficient fuel to complete the trip. It is also desirable to be able to fill the fuel tank at the same place that the fuel tank is filled. However, gasoline supplied from a pump is highly volatile and thus, there is a risk of explosion due to faulty piping and or pump. In the case of a liquid fuel pump, such as a fuel pump, mechanical problems are common and thus, if the liquid fuel is supplied to a tank that is empty there is a considerable risk of the explosion occurring. The danger of explosion is enhanced by the fact that flammable vapour can collect at the bottom of the tank and then slowly disperse throughout the tank. It is well known in the prior art to use gravity feed tanks to store fuel for a vehicle. However, the prior art tanks are not particularly well suited for use as a fuel tank for a vehicle. WO 85/04557 discloses a gravity feed tank which is capable of storing liquid under a first pressure on the top of the tank
