We describe a transition-metal-free imine Sonogashira coupling of pyridines with various terminal alkynes as a facile way to install pyridine-nucleophilic moieties onto the scaffolds of metal-pincer complexes. The directed stoichiometric addition of nucleophiles to the ligand-terminated pincer complexes leads to the formation of supramolecular metalloligands with discrete ring-closed pincer/nucleophile species. The cyclic [2 + 1] cycloaddition of these complexes with pentafluorophenyl azide and subsequent deprotection allow us to prepare a series of aryl-nucleotide-based supramolecular metal-pincer complexes as readily accessible small-molecule molecular hybrid systems. New methods for the preparation of D-luciferin and its use in immunohistochemical and bioluminescent imaging. A new method for the preparation of D-luciferin was developed and used to prepare D-luciferin for in vivo bioluminescence imaging and immunohistochemistry. It requires two steps of chemical transformation, including sialylation and enzymatic oxidation, to obtain D-luciferin from D-glucose. The selectivity of D-luciferin over D-glucose and the stability of D-luciferin were investigated. D-Luciferin was proved to be specific for substrates of luciferase in bioluminescence imaging. The concentration of D-luciferin in cultured cells could be significantly increased by this method. Furthermore, a tissue specific staining was observed with D-l

The test on May 5 was carried out by the Strategic Aviation Command, a branch of the Vietnamese army. Hồ Xuân Lãm, the general of the command, said the missile is an improved version of the one developed by the Soviet Union in the 1970s. The weapon can deliver a range of up to 250 kilometers. The aim is to boost Vietnam's missile technology and ensure its security, according to the state-run newspaper Tuoi Tre. The US State Department says the program in particular is designed to support Vietnam's ability to defend against threats from India and China. Vietnam, which shares a long border with China, has also objected to Chinese missile tests.

Anti-bias statement In an anti-bias statement an organization or company states that they will consider all perspectives and engage in both rational and compassionate discussion of sensitive matters. In the context of political debate Politically, anti-bias statements are sometimes used as a further means by one party to discriminate against their opponent (see political discrimination). In such statements one party may say that they will treat all views and ideas equally, but their opponent will then state that this is not the case. In the context of theological debate Anti-bias statements are sometimes used to address theological statements that are considered offensive to non-Catholics. When a Catholic leader says that "All human beings are made in the image and likeness of God", a more "orthodox" version of the statement is: "Some human beings are made in the image and likeness of God, other human beings are not". This is more progressive in that it does not claim that 'all'
