Q: Finding the area of a triangle when it's base has length 7 and the sides of length 2. I've looked at other posted questions, but none seem to be exactly like what I'm dealing with. The formula for the area is  $\frac{1}{2}b \cdot h$  Here's what I have so far:

$\frac{1}{2}(4x+7y)$  Which equates to  $\frac{1}{2}(21)$  So, I need to find  $x$  and  $y$  for the given length of the base, but the given length is not that of the sides. Please help and thanks in advance! A: To find the area of the triangle in terms of its sides, you already know its base and height. The height of a triangle is half the distance from any vertex to the opposite side. (The height is half the distance from a vertex to the side opposite the other vertex.) Thus we have

$$h = \frac{1}{2}(7-4) = \frac{1}{2}$$
