SET 2/2.A former restaurateur convicted in the 2009 fatal shooting of a Detroit man at an East Liberty restaurant is still eligible for credit for time served, a judge ruled. Before ruling on the motion, Associate Judge Rodney Rosen went over his options. He could decide to order half credit -- a little over two years -- for time served. Rosen denied a motion to reduce the sentence for Derrick Akine, who was convicted of first-degree murder. Police say the 28-year-old gunman shot twice at Maurice Simmons near the entrance of Sama Restaurant on E. Kirby near Linwood. He died on the sidewalk outside the restaurant. Rosen said he considered the magnitude of the crime before denying Akine's request. "If I were to sentence him to time served, when he gets out that might be the end of justice for this victim, the [prosecutor's] office would have no case," Rosen said. Akine's attorney, Margaret Rumsfeld, says she and her client are pleased by the ruling. "We always thought there was some credible question with regard to the time served issue," she said. "We actually felt it was 0cc13bf012
