DOWNLOAD. EUR (En,Fr,Es,It).Intel plans to run AMD's integrated graphics in future Core chips In the old days, a computer processor only had one type of integrated graphics, the kind you'd buy somewhere in the motherboard sticker. Intel made their own (and other companies made their own). Those days are coming to an end. In the not too distant future, Intel will have to license out their graphics business, and what they plan to do is basically what AMD is planning to do. Long story short, Intel plans to let other companies use their graphics IP. Intel will have more specializations and chip line-ups, but they will still offer to license out their graphics IP. Intel already has the graphics IP for integrated graphics, and AMD already has the graphics IP for graphics on their CPUs. Intel wants to offer a future generation of CPUs that can use AMD's graphics for integrated graphics. Intel are saying this should provide better
