* Scratchpads : A scratchpad is a special workspace that contains a blank canvas, preview panel, and lots of drawing tools. Scratchpads are useful for quick image manipulation. * Layer Masks : Layer masks are used to hide individual layers from view and apply various kinds of transparency or filters to a single layer, among many other useful Photoshop tools. * Brushes : Brushes are a type of Photoshop layer used to do much more than fill. For example, they can be used to draw, erase, and paint with. * Layer Groups : Layer Groups organize layers into groups, which is helpful for creating complex composites. * Photo Editing : Photo Editing enables the user to manipulate, edit, and save photos in bulk. Many available tools include image manipulation, image color grading, text tools, and retouching. * Vectors : Text is actually made up of tiny shapes called vectors. Photoshop includes tools for drawing vectors and using them to build custom letters, logos, headlines, and other artwork. * Photomerge : This feature is great for creating panoramic photos, because it allows you to combine up to 10 separate images into one seamless landscape. # Using the Top Features This section takes a look at some of the features that are offered in Photoshop and other Adobe products. ## Adjusting an Image's Colors It's a common misconception that the person who creates an image is the only one who knows what it should look like. A true artist understands the importance of understanding and adjusting the colors of an image so the image looks exactly as intended. You can use the Adjustments panel in the Layers panel of Photoshop (Figure 19-6) to do just that. As you adjust the colors of an image, the _colors_ in the image adjust colorlessly. The image is still visible, and Photoshop has "gutted" the color values to help you adjust the image. You need to keep in mind that the colors will not adjust to accommodate that adjustment and, at this point, the image will be only partially visible. Here are the primary tools you'll find in the Adjustments panel: * HSL/Grayscale. This tool adjusts the colors of an image by changing the amount of light or the color saturation.

01/07/2006 Fun things in Timbuktu One of the most interesting things I've seen in Timbuktu is the look of the sandals. It's a remarkable piece of functionality. The upper section of the shoe is a leathery peel that protects your foot while you walk. That's when you don't use the foot binding system, which is surprising to see here. You'd think they'd be mostly barefoot or only allowed one or two toes. The most interesting thing to see, for me, is how the sandals are worn. I was at the Museum of the Sahara in the city of Nouakchott and saw some patinaed shoes that looked remarkably similar to the Timbuktu sandals. What I found when I got home was that some of the patent leather was beginning to break away from the shoe and that most of the shoes had a crack in the front. Some of the sandals are interesting because they have a platform. The cracks mean that the foot sits on that platform with a reasonable amount of padding. What the foot gets is a balance between some shock protection and comfort. You could see that these shoes were worn by a lot of people. The alternate process of manufacturing the sandal had the use of the glazing process, which ended up being the reason for those cracking. It's hard to judge how comfortable the sandals are from the full wooden or cotton insides. The insides are the most comfortable part for me but I suppose having that pod on your feet could be advantageous.The University of California has recently announced that it will continue to conduct hearings on allegations of sexual harassment in and related to the College of Pharmacy at the University of California, San Francisco, and will announce the results of those hearings by March 31, 2013. The announcement comes after months of public protest surrounding the university's handling of a 2012 complaint against E. Lawrence Kinninman, a former major donor to the UC San Francisco School of Pharmacy, and the role that allegedly encouraged the university to close the investigation that led to Kinninman's resignation. The investigation took place under the university's Sexual Harassment Process, a special system adopted for the investigation of sexual harassment complaints, which is administrated by the UC Title IX Office.Q: I can't make my image size right, it won't stay in the div I'm trying to make this bent the fender didn't fix it or even find it. The part he did replace was a non-existent screw, which I appreciate the guy trying to charge me for, but he didn't go far enough. The new suspension parts were available for me to have the lower half of the shock tower replaced from an earlier Ford SVT Raptor I sold. Ford is NOT using the coil springs anymore, which makes the shocks less stiff, and Ford put the quad bungs back in with the stock hoops. I think the lower half should have been replaced along with the shock towers. I found out later that the mistake was on my part not being knowledgeable enough to know that was the position of the shock tower, so I would have liked the guy to not charge me for it. 5) Because the wheel had been repaired by the original installer, they also didn't inspect the hub and front ring gear to see if it had been repaired, they just told me they checked the wheel and it was fine. I had a second set of wheels installed in the same shop later that month. They had that set installed for me. I was also told that it was an old set of wheels, when it was in fact a set that were put on only a couple of months prior. They even called the original shop and asked them what kind of wheels they installed. The shop was perplexed by that, and initially they couldn't think why the shop would be trying to say that they installed this set. The second set of wheels had something
