The data is then used to create highly believable and intense close-up animations and smart player models, bringing the real-world data to life on the pitch. For the first time, EA has used recorded player movement data to create player animations in-game. Features include: New Pass System – A broader and deeper pass network, delivering more precise, intelligent passes and more realistic defensive interference. Players can now pick the right pass, both for the team and the ball. Fluid Flair: Improved fluidity and more realistic footwork animations make it easier for players to control the ball in the air and make the most of each touch. Match Day Rotation: Adjusted rotation ranges have been made more realistic to better reflect what a player might actually do on a pitch. Real Player Performances, Real Player Impressions: When an Impact Player gets the ball, the crowd reacts in the most authentic, realistic way, and the game delivers an impactful player performance that you feel every time. – An improved camera work allows players to reach more depth in their passes, and more angles to use. – Players draw defenders into bigger challenges to give them more options off the ball. – In-depth new animations for receiving and clearing passes, dribbling, shooting and passing. – New keybinds allow players to control their play with greater freedom and nuance, as well as more natural contextual actions and responses. – New gameplay engine, including multiple layers of collision-based animations, speed and acceleration of players and ball, and an all-new fluid and responsive player animation system.
