Bike Share Launches in Allentown

The City Bike Share program is finally available in Allentown. The program launched on Tuesday at a ribbon-cutting ceremony at the Allentown Transportation Center. Executive Director of the Allentown Redevelopment Authority Steven Creen said the program is a way to get more people to start riding bikes. "This program will provide transportation assistance to people who are willing to try," he said. The city is providing cash and equipment to eight companies -- including Fels, S&T Electric, Ford, and Giant -- that will be charged with building docking stations, which Fels and S&T Electric will operate. The companies will all make a combined profit from the program. The companies also will be responsible for maintenance. It will cost the companies about $2,000 to install a dock station. The cost includes training and other expenses. They will make about $700 in profit for each dock station on a monthly basis. The program also is benefitting Allentown International Airport, which will receive $5,000 from the program. The airport currently provides a low-income discount to its customers on all fare purchases. That amount will continue for the next three years.Q: MySQL Connections: Best practices?

I have a web site with a high transaction volume. It just hit about 1 million page views per month, or about 60 transactions per minute. I'm looking into connecting to my MySQL database from PHP, and I'm quite confused about the whole process. What I want to do is not have php run a new query every time it receives a request, and I'm quite confused about the best practices for this. What I have is a separate file that pulls data from the MySQL database (I have a table called checkboxes that I want to keep up to date with new values from the database). So, each time a user visits the page I look at the database for new values, and pull them into the table via PHP, and I also want to update the checkboxes on the page as the values in the database change. On the other hand, my site has about a million different
