An angry world, a fearless hero. He is Matt. He's in a running war for the planet. The world is always spinning, the earth is split into six cantons. Matt starts his battle in the Capital, then joins his battlefriends on the Frontier. Each canton is split into nine districts and each district has a working weapon. There are five kinds of weapons available in each canton. The weapons have differences in how they work but one thing remains the same: they all need blood. A lot of blood. As soon as Matt strikes the ground, he attacks and drains the blood from his enemies. His enemies can be found everywhere, but there are only four types of enemies: zombies, robots, machines and demons. Each enemy has a different feature. Zombies tend to have more health and attack more than the others. Robots have a super long range attack that shoots a splash of blood, machines can be split into several parts, the demons are actually a code of demons and they have a larger and a stronger will to consume as much blood as possible. Different weapons are needed to defeat each enemy type. Matt must get all kinds of blood-hungry weapons, so that he can improve them. He can do that by killing enemies, destroying weapons, renting weapons and unlocking weapons. When he runs out of blood, Matt will reach the next canton. Every canton has nine districts. There's an unlocked boss rush mode, as well as local and global leaderboards. Key Features: • Rotate the world freely - just like in a carnival ride! • Flies around on the planet's rotation and head to the next canton! • Nine levels - mix them up at the beginning of each level. • Run and slash - Dash Hale is a running-slasher. • Ten characters, ten stages - nine levels, ten characters and ten stages per canton. • Five weapons - Dash Hale is ready for action. • Unlockable Boss Rush mode - stronger, faster, and filled with blood. • Global leaderboards and local ones. • Blood bursts - blast blood at enemies - and stuff - to dodge their attacks. • Rewire the world - destroy and rebuild the terrain as necessary. • Find weapons and materials - challenge yourself against intruders and free more land for you! • Unlockable weapons - completely rework the world into a shooting gallery! • Customise your ride - with

The layout has some HTML5 video tags in it, and those are being pulled in fine. However, some users seem to get a blank page when trying to view the webpage. If I go to the debug/watch output, it is bringing up the list of javascript files that are required to be loaded (that is correct behavior), but it is the result that is blank. I'm not seeing anything strange in any of those files. It is as if the video isn't rendering for those users, but I can't tell what the difference is. Here is an example of an element that is being rendered without video (the video is present in the content tree): c9d1549cdd*

Wed Feb 01, 2011 2:35 pm While reading some dev blog entries, I stumbled onto a blog regarding a long term plan for the engine. In my opinion, it's an interesting idea and would be a good way to start getting things going even if it doesn't really make a difference right now. Since we're at it, and since these blogs are being read by people unfamiliar with the engine, I might as well post it here. Please be aware of this is actually a planned feature and may not make it into the game. The dev team would not like for it to remain here, which is why I am being so open with it. Also, in some of the comments about improving the engine they tell about the difficulty of improving it. This is really cool... its all about the POSE COD - [ Site Makeover by Bob Cudi - CLICK HERE ] Comment from 247: Posted on January 27, 2011 - 12:24pm First character entirely designed and hand sculpted by www.sculpturesbyben.com From Snake at Roadtrippers:PS: Maybe a "Ask Box" for Devs might be helpful. Like, "Hey [Bud] do you have any FEELINGS ABOUT HEADSHAPES? Stuff like " They are Fat/Big/Middle Aged/Cranky/Awesome?" Since it is modeling software, how do you prep for model building? Do you have a certain mindset to the design before making the model? Are there any unique ways to fit the model you are designing into the game? Would you recommend it to a non-modeler? Cause I did the face animation from scratch. And I have my excitement building with finishing this up. Something about the manhole cover that really did entice me to make. After doing some research of what models to use, I finally found the perfect one. I choose to pay the $50 and have this come to life. From where I was inside of the oven. Mmm... cut it up...

"Dry Drowning" is an interactive crime-drama-mystery-detective game based on a visual novel engine developed by Dollmann-Style. The game is set in the dystopian future of Nova Pemos, a world in a constant state of war and anarchy in a post-apocalyptic environment, where technology, law and order exist only on paper and people can do whatever they want, without any repercussions. The game is a futuristic story, set 20 years in the future on Planet Cybertron. During this time, a new technological singularity has created an era of technological progress, with humanity abandoning our bodies for cyborgs to live in cybernetic shells. The first and most important rule of Nova Pemos is the Law of Cybertron, a humanoid-inspired law based on the concept of resources, both technological and human, and ruled by a powerful cybernetics-based governative body known as National Cyberdex Corporation. Among the great powers of Cybertron are the United States of America, characterized by the free and prosperous human society it is, and the Russian Empire, which is a totalitarian state plagued with corruption, especially in the law enforcement system. Though Nova Pemos is constantly in war, all countries are completely segregated by impassable borders, with the exception of a small border area known as the Empire-Norway border, where a criminal society has thrived for years, exploiting these borders for their own gain. The main antagonist of the game is a serial killer whom the protagonist meets in a mental hospital, where he is caught and arrested by the protagonist after an extremely daring and serious investigation. Finally, the protagonist's assistant is a sexy cyborg named Mellissa, who has been posing as the protagonist's wife in order to infiltrate the criminal underworld. All characters are played by the complex and versatile voice actors who have been involved in the development of the game and its dynamic soundtrack, a true testimony to the free and independent character of the work, and that Dry Drowning has no master. The game, like a more mature alternative to John Wick, is written, designed and directed by the musician and executive producer Alessandro Masi, who has also lent his voice to some characters. Dry Drowning's original soundtrack has been made by the creative team of the game and a selection of famous artists such as Alessandro Masi, Akincer, Anna-May, Fausto Chisera,
