Calcified apical hypertrophic cardiomyopathy: report of two cases and review of the literature. Calcified apical hypertrophic cardiomyopathy is characterized by a combination of apical hypertrophic cardiomyopathy and coronary arteriosclerosis. We report two patients with this disease. The first patient, an 81-year-old man, was admitted for elective aortic valve replacement. On pathological examination, the apical hypertrophic cardiomyopathy was proved to be calcified, and the coronary arteriosclerotic change was also present. The second patient, a 52-year-old woman, was admitted with recurrent exertional dyspnea. This time, the pathological examination showed a typical apical hypertrophic cardiomyopathy without coronary arteriosclerotic changes. The coronary arteriosclerotic change was described by previous authors, but calcification in the myocardium was not mentioned by any of them. These case reports suggest that the calcification is a key element of calcified apical hypertrophic cardiomyopathy. Welcome to the E46Fanatics forums. Advertisement I have been looking at getting a new set of tires... I am looking at the stock Michelin NS3's (235/45/17) and the H&R Sport radials... I have read that the H&R tires are not as sticky as the stockers and can help in fuel economy? I have read mixed results on fuel economy. One person said the H&R's actually improved fuel economy
