For example, on the left hand side the house is seen above the action, while on the right hand side it is a little bit in the middle. Note the problem with the balance: the one hand side is too vivid, while the two next to it looks weird, as a result of a slightly unbalanced composition. However, one of them can be easily substituted with another hand on the other side. Thus, the location of the house can be moved to fit a better composition. We do not need to change the background to this extent as it is very possible to bring the houses in a better balance by changing its location.. Whenever a puppet uses the word "must" as often as this little episode, the audience knows what the context of the following lines imply. The only part that is not firmly established is the Greek bride's reason for leaving. However, there can be many reasons for this: the father, the groom, the Greek queen are not mentioned. The bride could have wanted to return to her home, or she could have found herself in an unhappy marriage. Other possibilities include that the father is not allowing her to go, or that her husband wants to marry another woman, or that she needs to go away and find her own husband. Another option is that the husband has lost his way in the underworld, and this is why he has to search for a substitute. In this case, the bride can rescue him and help him. However, in order to match the requirements of a perfect Greek story, and this is the case of both life and death, there are three extra conditions that the bride has to fulfill.. The most important condition is to provide the hero of the story with another wife (the children are not an option). As the audience already knows that the second wife will be the Greek one, it is now assured that the husband has to go into the underworld to find a new wife. In order to reach this condition, the audience can ask the scriptwriter to give the Greek character a new wife and husband, and to support this, the author should include
