Sport is a branch of entertainment devoted to sports. It includes individual sports (such as tennis, golf, cricket, sailing and baseball) as well as team sports (such as football, basketball and volleyball) as well as the sports activities that can be found in the Olympics (such as archery, swimming, gymnastics, taekwondo, weightlifting, judo and boxing). International sporting contests (such as the Summer Olympic Games and the Winter Olympic Games) are part of sport. The International Olympic Committee (IOC), which is affiliated to the Olympic Committee and the Fédération Internationale de Football Association (FIFA), sets the dates and conditions of the different international sporting contests. Competitions are classified into different sports by the IOC, such as badminton, biathlon, boxing, cycling, equestrianism, football, ice hockey, judo, modern pentathlon, rowing, sailing, taekwondo, tennis, triathlon, weightlifting and wrestling. In these competitions, athletes compete at the highest level in their specific disciplines. For example, in the Summer Olympic Games, athletes compete in different disciplines such as swimming, fencing, taekwondo, judo, boxing, archery and athletics.

Euro 2008 Tournament. The invention relates to systems for the global protection against wiretapping of applications using communication protocols which guarantee the integrity of the message transmission and which do not involve encryption of the message contents. Internet Protocol (IP) applications have become increasingly popular, and are used for the widespread transmission of voice, video, and data.

These applications are realized using communication protocols that ensure that the contents of the messages are transmitted in a secure, reliable, and robust manner. One of these protocols is the Privacy Communication Protocol (P-CP) [RFC3078]. The P-CP protocol is able to guarantee the integrity of the message contents, and thus to ensure that the contents of a secure message are never modified by an attacker. The P-CP protocol is defined by the following requests and responses: A request (1): M to send X and Y, where M is a unicast protocol data unit to the local machine, and X and Y are unidirectional messages to be sent to other machines; A response (2): M', where M' is a unicast protocol data unit containing X and Y. The integrity and confidentiality guarantees given by the P-CP protocol are related to the use of a secure channel, that is to say a communication link of a certain type, using which the communication protocols ensure the confidentiality of the message contents. A secure channel is defined by a particular value of the IEEE802.1x attribute called "wireless LAN Medium Access Control (MAC) Security Capability" or MACsec. Such a secure channel is used by the P-CP protocol when protocol messages are exchanged via wired, wireless, or virtual interfaces. In addition, depending on the type of secure channel used, the P-CP protocol makes use of access control mechanisms (or MAC Security Associations), defined by an IEEE802.1x attribute called "Security Association" or SAE, in order to allow the transmission of protected or privileged information. The communications between two P-CP nodes are organized in the following types of elements:
