The comprehensive program will provide a strong foundation in neurobiology, learning to identify effective strategies for training the next generation of scientists. The proposed training program is divided into three areas of study: Neurobiology, Neuroscience and Behavioral Neuroscience. The goal of this interdisciplinary program is to provide a strong background in knowledge of the nervous system and to train the next generation of scientists. The program faculty are drawn from the departments of Neurobiology and Behavioral Sciences and the School of Medicine. The faculty include a graduate training program Director and a Neurobiology faculty Director. A major focus of the program is on the training of graduate students. Each student will complete coursework in Neurobiology, Neuroscience, and Behavioral Neuroscience as well as one seminar course, two research rotations and participation in the Neuroscience Pre-doctoral Colloquium. Students will be prepared to matriculate into a graduate program in either Neurobiology or Behavioral Neuroscience. Students who are admitted to this program will have completed at least 1 year of graduate level education. Students will receive mentored research in the labs of the training faculty. In addition, there will be a number of collaborative training activities available to the trainees in the laboratories of other training faculty. RELEVANCE: The fundamental processes of the nervous system are highly conserved, and the mechanisms of learning and memory involve very similar neuronal systems and processes in 6d1f23a050
