To investigate the method of treatment for metal foreign body ingestion in children in China. From October 1995 to October 2006, 19 patients, aged 1 to 15 years (average age, 4.9 years), received endoscopic treatment for the foreign bodies due to accidental ingestion. The foreign bodies were detected in the gastric antrum, 10 (52.6%) in the oropharynx and 8 (42.1%) in the stomach. Most foreign bodies were metallic (17 cases, 89.5%). The endoscopic procedures included endoscopic retrieval (8 cases), morcellation (6 cases), pneumatic lithotripsy (3 cases), laparotomy (3 cases), intraluminal suturing (2 cases), and laparoscopy (1 case). During surgery, 7 foreign bodies were found in the esophagus, 2 in the stomach, 1 in the duodenum, and 1 in the jejunum. The patients were cured without complications. Endoscopic retrieval is the first choice for most metallic foreign bodies in children. Laparotomy and laparoscopy are alternative methods.Q: Likelihood of N independent random variables each being greater than a threshold Let
