Movable Type and Enduser caching systems

Until recently I have used a combination of perl and perl + `htmlpurifier` for a very simple caching system. After using apache with my perl/`htmlpurifier` solution for a few months I have come to the conclusion that it is not effective. The solution I have at the moment is the following:

- 1) Apache Cache with zlib compression.
- 2) Use a very simple key value cache in perl to cache results

1) This seems to work well for html pages. However I have discovered two things:

1. Sometimes articles take a while to be downloaded, as it has to wait for a lot of other content to be downloaded before downloading your article, the mtime and hitcount rarely seems to reflect this 2. It does not cache very well for cgi generated pages which will only run for a few seconds, resulting in many, many hitcounts recorded which are only very small changes. 2) In 6d1f23a050
