Cronus Bullseye free.Sydney City Centre The Sydney CBD I am currently very very excited about my residency in the infamous Sydney CBD; the beating heart of Australia. I fell in love with the place when I first saw the scenery, and it's been a nagging, persistent love affair since. Now, I have to touch base with the people who have seen it first-hand. So I have been frequenting and feeling the mood (are we having a heat wave?) of the CBD for the last three weeks, and here are some things that have stuck out for me: The weather hasn't really hit its stride yet, but with the European summer about to descend it is pretty refreshing. I have taken to wearing low heeled sandals and navy shorts with a printed zip around my thigh. It's becoming a fashionista's dreamland. The architecture, the people, the energy, it's all so inspiring for an artist. Hipster shopping is back. But the day is spent at a cafe, surfing the net and talking to strangers (or one should assume that's what they are doing). There's no doubt about it, time spent visiting cafes in the CBD c6a93da74d
