ACK is a binary form of data. It is used to confirm the data transfer has been received or to warn the sender that the data has been lost and re-transmitted. ACK protocol includes two different types of ACKs, Connection Change ACK (CCA) and Acknowledgment ACK. Most of the servers implement the No Lock-in ACK (NLA) after CCA. Different network applications use different methods of ACK packet to resolve network issues. ACK methods are required to be implemented in the routers by server, middleware and applications to work.Q: How to get raw contacts data from.csv?
