Non-Steam Skyrim Creation Kit Edition Overview.Q: How to add "Accept-language" header to every request sent to site without using cookies? I have an API I'm exposing for third-party use, and I'm able to set the accept-language parameter, but is it possible to add this header to every request going out, which is normally done by setting cookies on a browser? This is something that I would like to do in my API, as I would like to provide the language to the end user as well, so I only think it's possible through the server setting this instead. Any ideas? A: You can set the accept-language header in a route handler. public class MyWebApiConfig : WebApiConfig { public static void Register(HttpConfiguration config) { //... config.Routes.MapHttpRoute( name: "DefaultApi", routeTemplate: "api/{controller}/{action}/{id}", defaults: new { id = RouteParameter.Optional } ); c6a93da74d
