The CourseLab software is free to use under the GNU General Public License 2 or 3 (GPLv2 and GPLv3), and the licensed fee of $60-70 is only applicable if the software is used to create courses and eLearning modules for a commercial or educational market. Courselab 2.5 is currently the latest version that can be run on the e-Learning Machines. However, because Courselab 2.4 is not available on the Linux operating system (Cycle 4) used by the e-Learning Machines (the Ubuntu operating system), users are currently advised to migrate their Courselab projects to version 2.7, which has been moved to a GitHub repository where user data is not migrated. The software has been upgraded to the Ubuntu 18.04 LTS operating system, which is the default distribution and version in the e-Learning Machines. The move to version 2.7 also affects other Courselab features, including support for Java and Microsoft Office. Courselab version 2.7 adds support for building courses for both online and offline delivery. Courselab 2.7 is built using the latest version of the LMS repository for eLearning Materials. Courselab 2.7 is a free download for all users on the Courselab website. Courselab version 2.7 can be downloaded from the Courselab website and installed using the built-in installation procedure. Courselab 2.7 can be installed in both 64 and 32 bit versions, and the installer detects if it is being run on 32 or 64 bit systems. If 64 bit systems are being used then Courselab 2.7 must be reinstalled using the reinstallation process to update the user data.
