The congress that created the office of the President did not spell out what the occupant of the office should look like. In fact, the only two specific requirements in the Constitution for those who hold this office are that each president be at least 35 years old, and that they be at least nine years older than the vice president (currently, the vice president is the oldest living president). There are many common misconceptions regarding the qualifications to be President of the United States. For example, there are major misconceptions that one must be a natural born citizen, have lived in the United States for at least 14 years, and that the president must be a male. None of these requirements are in the Constitution. There are also misconceptions regarding how presidents are chosen. The Electoral College ensures that every American, not just the people in the most populated states, have a say in the choice of the president. The Electoral College usually ends up with a split vote, and the smaller states usually end up being more significant. The Democrats and Republicans share a system, the two-party system, in which candidates run as either the Republican or Democratic candidate and the two parties split the electoral votes. The presidential candidates sometimes change parties because there is a significant split between the voters, with some states supporting one party and others supporting the other. In this case, if a third-party candidate were elected president, it would be due to the fact that a majority of states have a vote for that third-party candidate, but not enough of them to win in a real way. Presidential nominees must win a majority of the electoral votes in a majority of states. If no candidate wins a majority of the electoral votes, the House of Representatives holds a contingent vote, meaning that the House votes for the person that received the most votes in all of the states.

This device provides law enforcement with the capability to communicate with the mobile device. Using this software, officers can send text messages, make phone calls, and access internet via the cellular device. The software, when installed on a mobile device, can relay the exact location of that device so officers can be deployed to its location as soon as the device rings. The device can also be used to provide other real-time location information to officers in the field, as well as provide a near real-time monitoring of law enforcement units. The USCIS inspector general (IG) and Office of Investigations (OI) will be issuing an expanded, consolidated and updated website for the public to view their compliance policies and procedures (CPP) and the enforcement action history in the electronic database used to store the personnel enforcement cases listed in the CPP. The expanded website will include information on the applications, petitions and other documents and files that are all identified in the CPP. The OI will close the old Enforcement History System (EHS) website and will launch the CPP site on March 1, 2019. The OI will close the old EHS site on March 1, 2019. The old EHS will be retired on March 31, 2019. The new CPP site will be accessible by navigating to <https://xanadu.uscis.gov/ehs>. The Office of the Commissioner has released the final version of the Annual Report to Congress to the President and the American People. The report is due to Congress on March 1st, 2019. This report is required by law and contains the information in the preceding annual report. The Office of the Commissioner's annual report provides a comprehensive summary of the Office's activities and performance. The report also provides an overview of the agency's most notable accomplishments, its budget, its organizational structure, and its challenges and recommendations for the future.
