Reconfiguring a Windows Update service is a very common task for system administrators. This blog will show you how you can configure the Windows Update service to download updates from a Microsoft Update server. You will need to open Administrative tools and select the Services listed in the table. IBM installs a software patch, service pack, or hotfix for your product only after it has been validated. IBM will test your product or software to determine if it is affected by a security vulnerability, as well as the update. IBM will also evaluate and test any new features, functions, or functionality introduced in the updates. We recommend that customers apply all updates according to the detailed instructions provided by IBM. Updates are typically available for 90 days after they are released by Microsoft. My last blog series demonstrated how to use Windows Update to install all available updates for a specific computer. We also showed how to edit the update settings for specific updates. The in-place upgrade feature is a useful way to install updates that are currently being used. Microsoft has recently announced the end-of-life schedule for Windows XP. Windows XP will end-of-support on April 8, 2014. We are still recommending that you keep your Windows XP PCs up-to-date with the latest service packs and hotfixes. You can view the most recent updates to your Windows XP PC in two ways: You can use the Windows Update in Control Panel to view the most recent updates. Another way is to use the Microsoft Update command-line tool to view the most recent updates to your Windows XP PC. We will look at both methods. 5ec8ef588b
