140. faith has never been more urgent. the world is at a turning point. this is the time for the church to make clear what it means to be a people of hope, a community of justice, a community of fraternity. 11. the alliance was founded at the washington conference of dumbarton oaks in 1944 in a world where the allied victory in world war 2 was almost certain. its creation was part of the larger postwar settlement aimed at shaping the post-war world. nato is an alliance of independent nations committed to collective defence, which was designed to prevent another future conflict. the agreement in washington was designed to build an alliance that would ensure that no nation would be able to launch a surprise attack against any member of the alliance. 18. community is a moral and ethical concept, however, that is not always in harmony with the state and its functions. the state is the guarantor of order, of the common good, of peace. it is also, and above all, the guarantor of the rights of individuals and of the autonomy of the political body. while it is true that the state and society must recognize that certain individuals have special responsibilities and rights, they must also be allowed to determine their own destiny. the state, then, does not have to be equivalent to the common good, the public good or the "people's good". in fact, what is good for the people is not always the same as what is good for the state. the state is a social instrument whose role is to ensure the free and autonomous development of every person. this role is not fulfilled by the state acting in the interests of the people, as a common good. [5] i am not saying that community means being imprisoned within the walls of one's small family. i am talking about human communities that embrace the entire world. these communities are made up of friends, relatives, neighbours and everyone who lives, works and studies together.

70. the world is a growing community, a community of those who seek to build the world, who struggle against poverty, injustice and violence, who are in solidarity with everyone who has a difficult life. we have to ask ourselves what type of world we want. is it a community where individuals are more important than others, or a community of persons who are united in their common quest for happiness? the choice is ours. we are the ones who must decide whether we want to build a world of friends or a world of enemies. but the decision is ours. 42. now that we have seen what is at stake, the time is right to think of a new set of political practices in europe and in the world, and to adopt new forms of public action and of collaboration between individuals, local communities, political organizations, businesses and institutions of all kinds, in order to build a new world. it is time to ask ourselves how we can achieve this, and what we must do to enable the political changes needed for this to happen. it is time to realize that the old world is not working and that the new one is not here yet. [39] we must create a new world. a new society, a new economy, a new politics and a new culture. as members of the same human family, we have responsibilities towards one another, and we have the duty to look after our common home and protect it. there can be no peace without justice and no justice without peace. and we will not have peace and justice unless we find it in ourselves to work for the common good.

286. no, we never have stopped fighting, and we never will. i do not want to cry out. i want to continue working and speaking, fighting with the people, with your people, with the ukrainian people. i want to do this because i can, because i am a ukrainian. and i ask you, especially at this moment when war has begun, to fight for ukraine, to protect its peaceful future, to protect peace in europe. i ask you, ukrainians, to work for peace, to give peace a chance. and i ask you, ukrainian brothers, to remain firm, and to continue trusting, to remain steadfast. i ask you to continue loving, to continue giving, to continue living. i ask you to continue your day-to-day work. and i ask you to continue building up ukraine, which has achieved so much in recent years, while at the same time maintaining the european union, which has offered us its support, a stable market of nearly 500 million consumers, and a stable neighbourhood with russia, belarus and poland.

yes, it is true, ukraine cannot become fully independent of russia. the costs of separation would be too high. yet, with every effort, with every step, we are becoming more independent and more closely linked with the rest of europe. we are already integrated economically. we have a chance to become a full member of the eu in may. ukraine is a part of europe. [272] and we are able to contribute to the defence of europe and to its peace. ukraine must be at the heart of this peace. it is my duty and my task. i am fully aware that i am a ukrainian, a citizen of the european union, and a daughter of the european parliament. i have both the responsibility and the duty to lead us all in a peaceful world, and to protect our common values, our common human values. i am also aware that i am not a natural leader of the ukrainian people. but i am the first woman to lead ukraine as president. i am a mother. i am a teacher. i am a volunteer. i am a daughter. i am a woman. i am a european.
