I am developing an application in which I have the URL of one particular site. I don't want my application to be open in the browser and I want to parse the urls and automatically view the page in my application. Is there any possible way to do this? A: There is no way to directly open a url in the phone. The best way you can do this is save an HTTP request on android database and when user enters that url you will be able to show that url on your application. Q: Is this a norm inequality?
