this isn't the first time that a bollywood film has dealt with the issue of homosexuality. the year was 2004 and devdas had already swept the box office with its tale of two lovers. five years later, bombay tackled the subject again with its tale of a son coming out to his father, played by shahrukh khan. the year was 2014, and paan singh tomar followed a year later, with irrfan khan's character, a runner who identifies as a homosexual. the unique dialogue-heavy role of paan singh tomar, the dacoit whose life turns around after he is shot, was perfect for irrfan khan's acting skills. the actor was initially hesitant to accept the offer but then after getting a brief about the dacoit's life, irrfan khan knew this was the character he needed to play. dhulia would later say that irrfan khan believed that the film's success was due to his performance as paan singh tomar, while dhulia believed that irrfan khan brought the character to life. the film revolves around the life of paan singh tomar, a dacoit, who leads a band of bandits and is captured while trying to hold up a train and is later freed by the british forces. irrfan khan, who learnt about the life of the dacoit from watching a documentary, became the first actor to play the character of a dacoit in a bollywood film. irrfan khan said that he wanted to portray paan singh tomar as a human, who was also capable of taking orders, coming to terms with the british and serving as their right hand in the ongoing war. irrfan khan also said that in his interactions with the british officers, he was able to study the human face of the british. during an interview, irrfan khan said that he did not find it easy to portray a dacoit in a film because it is not easy to portray the character. irrfan also said that he did not take great care in training himself for the role.
