I'm having a hard time to find the difference in the performances between the following 2 inputs: Input1: String line = scnr.readLine(); Input2: String line; BufferedReader reader = new BufferedReader(new FileReader(fname)); line = reader.readLine(); Both inputs are reading exactly the same thing (one line of a text file) but the second one seems to be faster according to the several profilers I've tested. Is there any specific reason for this? (I know that there is no difference in the implementations) A: In the second case, you're loading the whole file into memory and then returning one line. In the first case, you're loading a line and discarding it, so you're not using much memory. Also, if the file is small and you're reading it only once, you'll probably get the same timing either way. But if you've got a large file and you're doing this for a big array of many lines, the second approach will be very much faster. Last Thursday, the New York City Council held a public hearing on the MTA Bus Plan, which advocates for an $8.6 billion effort to overhaul the city's bus fleet. The MTA has since been criticized for misinformed cost estimates, including that proposed bus lanes in the East River would cost the city $98 million. When he released his MTA Bus Plan proposal, Governor Andrew Cuomo said that the improvements would be "a return of public transit to a majority-minority community of New York City, and will eliminate over-reliance on automobiles and provide for jobs and future growth." But what do we know about the real impacts of bus improvements on low-income communities, where the majority of New Yorkers live? According to a

Because it's always funnier when the trio are involved, but I don't think this is completely set in stone. Buffy's made it pretty clear that they're the de facto team, so it'd be cool to see other teams.. Buffy the Vampire Slayer. Xander's team. Interesting thing is that Buffy and Xander are on roughly the same track as far as their magical training. Buffy The Vampire Slayer Season 7, Episode 1, 720p, 1080p - syfy.com. I have a circular image which I want to change image on click. I use "onClick" listener on ImageView. The listener itself works correctly, but when I try to change text of a Button on the same position by button.setText(), it doesn't update on screen. I have read some places that the listener in some way blocks updating of the UI, but I haven't found anything relevant. I have found a workaround. I have added a listener to a button on a separate FrameLayout (outside of the view of the ImageView). It works. But I would rather it to be inside the same view. Does anyone know where I am wrong? Here is what I have: ... ImageView img = (ImageView)findViewById(R.id.fish); img.setOnClickListener(new View.OnClickListener() { @Override 04aeff104c
