To monitor and validate the detection methodology of selective capsaicin (CAP) and decarboxylated CAP (D-CAP) in rat serum by HPLC-MS/MS. Different solid-phase extraction (SPE) sorbents including a C18 bonded-hybrid SPE cartridge, polymeric sorbent, and a C18 bonded-hybrid SPE cartridge with end-capping were investigated. A pentafluoropropionamide-bonded sorbent was developed and validated. The method showed good selectivity and sensitivity. The extraction recovery of the two analytes was more than 73.2% and 84.3% using the polymeric sorbent and the C18 bonded-hybrid SPE cartridge, respectively. The LLOQ was 0.05 ng/mL for CAP and D-CAP using a polymeric SPE cartridge and 1 ng/mL for CAP and D-CAP using a C18 bonded-hybrid SPE cartridge. The validated method was successfully applied to investigate the pharmacokinetics of CAP and D-CAP in rats.

Dracula II: The undead in the Philippines As long ago as the late nineteenth century, some stories of Dracula's lingering presence were circulating in the Philippines. A man in Osmena, Makati, in 1887 became convinced that his landlady's young daughter was transformed into a vampire at night. This same girl was the subject of a melodrama written by the prolific dramatist Antonio Luna. Like the Lugani boys, at least two Filipinos claimed to have been attacked by vampires, and one of these claimed to have been cured by drinking holy water. Fiction and "fact" played a crucial role in the popular imagination of the Philippines in the nineteenth century. It was a time when the people were still taking their first steps along the path to modernization and modernization was in its infancy.
