Seated in the Boardroom, Maj General Abdul Sattar noted that he had recently made an inspection at the Siachen Glacier located near Indo-Pakistan borders to verify the new At one point, the military has built 10 permanent posts in the narrow strip of contested territory. to check out a new OP outpost. The risks for military operations are profound as the mountain passes cut through one of the world's most rugged terrains, exposing troops to avalanches, blinding snowstorms and crevasse traps. The army's 61st Division, known as the Dogra, was raising the roof of the old post and moving to a new location called "Flankers" after the main push to capture the strategically important Glacier... The Army has been trying to capture and consolidate the Siachen with mixed results, while Pakistani troops have been engaged in sporadic clashes with Indian soldiers. "I was so shocked," she said of the unexpected birth weight. There were concerns that the tiny girl wouldn't survive, but Rohrbaugh's daughter Maddison cried at birth, and is now a healthy 3-year-old with an unusual story to tell. Rohrbaugh has been an infant and pediatrics nurse for three decades. She helped co-found the American College of Nurse-Midwives, and is a board-certified lactation consultant. "She is an incredibly perceptive child, and you can be sure she picked up on all the issues that I had going through with the birth of this baby," she said. "She watched my sleep deprivation, anxiety and stress. All of those things were visible in front of her. She watched her mom go through it." Rohrbaugh's daughter and birth story are part of a new campaign by the American College of Nurse-Midwives that addresses weight and weight gain concerns around the start of school.
