Somatization syndromes in primary care: Psychometric properties of the Pain-Systemic syndrome in European community healthcare patients (PSYMED-EU) questionnaire. The Pain-Systemic syndrome (PSYMED-EU) questionnaire has been developed to assess somatization syndromes in European primary care patients. The study aim was to evaluate the psychometric properties of the PSYMED-EU questionnaire. The PSYMED-EU comprises four domains: somatic symptoms, affective and social symptoms, pain and functional disability. Validity and reliability of the instrument, mainly internal consistency, were assessed. In addition, convergent and discriminant validity of the questionnaire and its subscales were evaluated by comparison to measures of psychological distress and physical disease. The PSYMED-EU questionnaire was administered to a representative sample of persons attending health-care services of five European countries. A subsample was assessed within the same assessment, the remaining participants were assessed at their clinic visit as usual. Overall, 1098 patients (mean age 45.4 years, standard deviation 13.5) completed the questionnaires. No missing values or item-total correlations lower than 0.30 were observed. Internal consistency of the PSYMED-EU was high ($\alpha = 0.91$) and comparable for the total score and subscales. Criterion validity was good, while construct validity was weak. Affective symptoms were the most common symptoms, followed by pain and functional disability. The PSYMED-EU questionnaire is a valid instrument for the assessment of som
