I'm not a designer, but I do working with the type over the last decade but with Photoshop and Lightroom for many years it's the ideal tool in producing the finished work. The latest version is a great update to the previous and delivers some outstanding and much requested software features. Being able to open files like 2010, 2012 and 2013 files is a great advantage I must say. The version 5.2 system is very easy to use and I think that the software will be most popular. But I use a Mac and Lightroom as the ultimate editing combo! The one word that comes to mind when I think about the release of version 5.2 are "ROFL!" I was pretty excited to try this release to see if the days of being able to run Photoshop in your browser were behind us. Of course they weren't, we still can't preview image files we have not downloaded. And the update to this version of Adobe Photoshop breaks the ability to see the file details panel in a browser window. Sorry, Adobe, you just lost a potential customer. Regarding Creation Cloud. It's only been working on this CSR for about a day and it's taken me completely by surprise. I didn't expect to acquire so much material in such a short time. I thought that the OS would be the largest hurdle to overcome. I would also like to mention that the Cloud Documents feature was covered pretty extensively in the preview videos at the time that I registered. Since the introduction of the CC beta, I have not looked back. The use of both Eyes, Eyes and Hands is extremely useful. In general, I really recommend the product, particularly because of the high rate of hand off between Lightroom and Photoshop. I will say this once again, the use of both eyes, eyes and hands is invaluable. Thanks a million, Bridge and the features it brings to the Creative Cloud.
